THE INSTITUTE FOR THE HUMANITIES AT SALADO FALL 2006 LECTURE SERIES

Bernard Rapoport

Bernard Rapoport has lived the American Dream. Born to Russian-Jewish immigrant parents in San Antonio in 1917, he grew up in modest circumstances and worked his way through the University of Texas during the Great Depression.

In 1951, he and a partner founded the American Income Life Insurance Company, which he developed into a multi-million dollar business. He uses his wealth to support a host of local, national, and international organizations. Fortune magazine named him as one of America's forty most generous philanthropists for his support for education, social justice, and liberal political causes. Rapoport calls himself a capitalist with a conscience.

He lives in Waco, where he heads the Bernard and Audre Rapoport Foundation. Among his many public commitments, he is a past member of the Board of Regents of his beloved University of Texas at Austin.

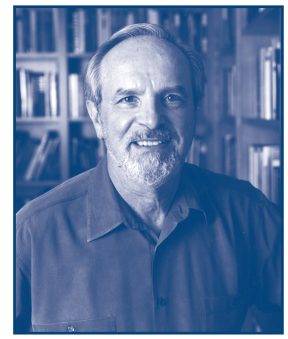

Gregory Pence, Ph.D.

Dr. Gregory Pence is one of the pioneering and most prominent bioethicists in America. He is internationally famous for defending cloning, genetically modified food and stem cell research.

As the director of the medical ethics program in the School of Medicine at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, he has taught medical ethics to first year medical students for nearly 30 years. In 1994 he received that school's highest teaching award.

Dr. Pence is a prolific writer who is not afraid to address controversial subjects head-on. His Classic Cases in Medical Ethics is one of the standard textbooks of bioethics. His Designer Food: Mutant Harvest or Breadbasket of the World? won a Choice Outstanding Academic Title in 2003.

Dr. Pence received his doctorate from New York University.

Thomas Moore, Ph.D.

Dr. Thomas Moore is a best-selling author, psychotherapist, musician and religious philosopher. He is a leading lecturer and writer in the areas of archetypal psychology, mythology and the arts. His eclectic career has also included stints as professor of religion at SMU and sixteen years in private psychotherapy practice.

At 13 he entered a preparatory seminary for the Servite religious order, but left shortly before being ordained as a priest twelve years later. He spent several years studying music, religion and philosophy, eventually earning master's degrees in musicology and theology and a PhD in religion from Syracuse University.

His best-selling book, Care of the Soul, was published in 1992. Some of his other books include, Rituals of the Imagination, Soul Mates and Meditations, and Dark Night of the Soul. Moore is married to artist Joan Hanley, and lives in both New Hampshire and Ireland.

The Institute for the Humanities focuses its Fall 2006 lecture series on the search for meaning in our lives and work. The series features lectures from or about those who are committed to making a difference in the world.

In keeping with that theme, the Institute is pleased to present a special public lecture by writer/actor/filmmaker Turk Pipkin and the screening of his new film "Nobility – A Look at the Future Through the Eyes of Nine Nobel Laureates." Pipkin, who directed the film, will discuss the insights and inspiration he received from the nine Nobel laureates featured in the film, and how we can work - individually and collectively - toward a better future for all children. The film follows his personal journey to find enlightening answers about that future. It was filmed across the U.S., and in France, England, India, and Africa, and combines the insights of nine distinguished Nobelists with a first-person view of world problems and the children who are most challenged by them.

This film, and the sequel he is currently filming, are his most ambitious projects to date, but he has had a career like no other. A former stand-up comedian who gave up performing after a long run on the road with Rodney Dangerfield and many others, he's since published eight books, and written a hundred hours of primetime television. He's also traveled around the world for thirty years, writing as he journeyed for a dozen national magazines. One of his latest incarnations is as a recurring character in the HBO hit series, "The Sopranos."
